New Office for Victory Design

A Terrace Overlooking the Sea Where New Ideas Can Blossom

Victory Design has moved to new premises. The new open-plan office with a floor space of over 300 square meters looking out over the Bay of Naples incorporates interesting functional and architectural features. Every detail has been carefully designed, with the use of glass and marble, nautical elements and exposed electrical services. There are also antiques, a small gym and cafeteria. Strongly supported by Victory Design's founder, this project has been realized with great versatility in mind and special attention has been paid to the aesthetic aspects without forgetting the comfort of both the office team and guests.

A new departure for Victory Design: the design studio founded in 1989 by Brunello Acampora has new premises. And it's not just the address that's different. What has changed, above all, is the image of the firm's headquarters. Victory Design is now located in a splendid open-plan office with a floor space of 300 square meters facing the sea on the seventh floor of a glass-faced building in Via Nuova Marina, in Naples.

Although, as a result of the multidisciplinary nature of this team of designers, architects, and engineers, the studio's design and research and development activity has continued without interruption for twenty years, in the new office there's definitely a breath of fresh air. This is thanks to the architectural features chosen by the studio and the taste with which it has adapted the whole floor to its own requirements.

This is clearly seen in the materials and functional architectural devices adopted. Particularly notable are the clear glass partitions dividing the office spaces without closing them off from each other; the white Carrara marble used for all the floors, without gaps between the slabs; and the use of wood — white for the bookshelves, dark brown for the furnishing accessories. The result is a modern open-plan office that, anything but austere, is very comfortable and designed to be versatile in its use. The cables of the electrical services hang down from the ceiling above the desks and tables, but they can be diverted to different areas as required, as they are all intentionally exposed and not fixed to the walls.

There are also corners with antiques and leather armchairs where people can sit back and admire the fascinating view. In fact, there is extensive use of glass, with full-height sliding French windows in the four external walls, which, on the three sides from which the bay is visible, give onto a continuous terrace. Thus, as one proceeds from the entrance towards the spaces near the external walls, one increasingly has the sensation of being in an enormous veranda overlooking the sea or on the bridge of a cruise ship. This impression becomes even stronger if the windows are opened and one can breathe the intoxicating smell of the sea whenever the wind freshens and the waves are whipped up.

Every detail has been carefully designed in this comfortable workplace, which has been enhanced by nautical elements — such as the vertical motif of three portholes with transparent and reflective glass used in the doors — and other spaces for lunch and coffee breaks. The rear part of the premises — facing the roofs of residential buildings, the Federico II University of Naples, the campanili of the convent of Santa Chiara, and the dome of the cathedral in the city's historic center — houses a room with state-of-the-art gym equipment, LED wall screens, and a cafeteria with a bar. And all this is at the disposal of the Victory team and their guests!
